Safety Supervision: Making Defensible Decisions at the Front Line

Your supervisors make decisions every day. Are those decisions defensible?

When something goes wrong on your watch, the question isn't just 'what happened?' It's 'what did your supervisors know, what did they decide, and can they account for it?' Most can't.

LEGAL CONTEXT

Australian courts have consistently held that supervisors carry personal legal exposure for decisions made at the front line. Ignorance of duty is not a defence.
