Safety Supervision: Making Defensible Decisions at the Front Line

In mining, a wrong call at the front line can end a career — or a life.

Mines are high-consequence environments where supervisors make critical decisions under time pressure, incomplete information and competing demands. The law expects them to get it right — and to prove it.

LEGAL CONTEXT

In Kalidonis NT Pty Ltd (2022), the operator faced prosecution after supervisors failed to apply documented risk controls. The courts examined exactly what supervisors knew and what they decided. Personal liability followed.

Built for mining supervisors and team leaders.
