ONLINE PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT COURSE

Organisational Foresight

In manufacturing, the conditions for catastrophic failure build slowly. This course teaches you to see them.

Production pressure, normalised deviation, leadership detachment, structural secrecy — these are not random features of manufacturing environments. They are the five conditions that precede every major industrial disaster. Organisational Foresight gives manufacturing leaders and board members the frameworks to identify and interrupt them.

LEGAL CONTEXT

The Texas City refinery explosion, the Longford gas plant disaster — both were preceded by years of accumulated conditions that leaders failed to recognise. Under Australian WHS law, officers have a personal duty of due diligence that includes knowing how the organisation is actually performing.

For manufacturing executives, operations directors and board members.
